ABOUT RED CROW IN THE EAST TEXAS BASED ARTIST'S OWN WORDS

I love stories, good stories. Stories that make me think and stick with me. Even stories that haunt me. I've been around a while. In fact, I turned a double six on my last birthday, and I want to write songs that tell those kinds of stories. The ones that hit me in the heart, take my breath away, and make me nod and say, "Yep, that is exactly how I feel." I won't waste my time on stories that don't move me. So here's my third solo album Red Crow. Thirteen stories in the form of songs that get my motor running, and excite me every time I bust 'em out on stage. These are songs I want to hear. That make a difference to me. And the songs that folks ask me "Is that on a record?" The songs with stories I keep coming back to. From my perspective, these songs are about the real stuff, the important stuff, the real people and most of all real life. In the end, that's the only kind of stories that count. At least for me, Lord knows, at my age I don't have time for anything else.
